

HOOP SKIRTS TO GRACE SUFFRAGE PAGEANT

Women Start Making of Costumes.
Sixteen Society Girls Will Pose in Symbolic Friezes.

Costume headquarters for the Susan B. Anthony suffrage pageant, to be held December 12, at Convention Hall, under the auspices of the Congressional Union for Women Suffrage were opened yesterday at 1225 H street northwest. Machines have been installed and women will commence immediately the work of making dresses for the various episodes of the pageant.

Many of the costumes consist of hoop skirts, fully ten yards in circumference. Quaker little pole bonnets are being manufactured to give local color to the scenes of domestic life. Some of the episodes are laid as far back as 1855. Mrs. William S. Moore is chairman of the costume committee. Mrs. R. H. A. Clark, of Belmont, has been appointed mistress of the wardrobe.

The following sixteen society girls will pose in the symbolic friezes that appear between the episodes: Misses Georgina Schofield, daughter of Gen. Schofield; Harriet Peckham, daughter of Judge Peckham; Margaret Revere, the youngest debutante of the navy set; Ruth Hagood, Helen Burch, Anne Hopkings, Catherine Burdett, Lillian Jones, Mary Henry, Pocahontas Butler, Janet Cowen, Mary Lord Andrews, Candace Howard, Margaret Howard, the Misses Barber, and Edna O'Connell.

The patronesses include: Mrs. Christian Hemmick, Mrs. George Odell, Mrs. Brown Miller, Mrs. Henry Blount, Mrs. Harveyn Thompson, Mrs. Barrett Ridgely, Mrs. Robert Peary, wife of Rear Admiral Peary, U. S. N.; Mrs. Richard Wainwright, Mrs. Robert Baker, Mrs. Henry Macfarland, Mrs. Appleton P. Clark, Mrs. Theodore Noyes, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Henry Graves, wife of chief foreman of United States court, Mrs. Sigmund of Rear Admiral Sigmund; Mrs. Clara D. Nellig, of Neighborhood House; Mrs. George Sutherland, wife of Senator Sutherland, of Utah; Mrs. Reed Smoot, wife of Senator Smoot, of Utah; Mrs. William T. Borah, wife of Senator Borah, of Idaho; Mrs. Thomas J. Walsh, wife of Senator Walsh, of Montana; Mrs. John D. Works, wife of Senator Works, of California; Mrs. H. J. Hill, wife of Congressman Hill, of New Mexico; Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, wife of Congressman Mondell, of Wyoming; Mrs. Reeve Lewis and Mrs. Henry Ashurst.

SAYS BILLARD COMPANY WAS IN N. H. CONTROL

Sensational Charge Is Made by Government Counsel at Trial of Directors.

Special to The Washington Herald.
New York, Nov. 22.—The session of the New Haven district court today ended with an incident that bordered close on the sensational. It had the tone of a challenge to Charles S. Mellen, the government's chief witness.

The name of Richard Olney, Secretary of State under President Cleveland, figured in the evidence. Another witness, House clerk between President Roosevelt and Mellen was recounted by the latter, who spent his eighteenth day in the witness chair.

Homer S. Cummings, of the defense's counsel, argued against the admissibility of any evidence relating to the Billard Company. He declared that it was not controlled by the New Haven.

"This concern was as much dominated and controlled by the New Haven as the England Navigation Company," he said. "Every share of its stock was in control of Mr. Mellen."

"No," interrupted Mellen, shaking his head and laughing.
Counsel for the defense laughed at what they evidently believed was a setback for the government.

"I know that Mellen will deny that statement," exclaimed R. L. Bates, of government counsel, firmly, his tone stilling into a sternness that started in the courtroom. "But we will prove it from him."

"In so many words," asked Judge Hitt, "you mean to say that this was a New Haven Company?"

"Every step of the Billard Company was a step of the New Haven Company," replied Bates, and Mellen's argument was then announced until tomorrow. Mellen's face was sober as he left the courtroom.

ASKS PERMIT TO CROSS INTO U. S. TERRITORY

Carranza Seeks the Privilege for Uniformed Officers and Men of His Escort.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Laredo, Texas, Nov. 22.—Chief Executive Carranza formally requested permission this afternoon from Brigadier General Evans, commanding officer at Fort McIntosh for the officers and enlisted men in his escort to cross from Nuevo Laredo into Laredo wearing their uniforms. Gen. Evans transmitted the request with his favorable recommendation to Gen. Frederick Funston, commanding general of the border forces.

The orders of the War Department under date of April 15 prohibiting officers and men of fighting American sections from crossing into the United States have been strictly enforced against officers and men alike.

Yesterday at the international bridge Francisco Cos, general of a division, and Gen. Casero Castro, cavalry commander of Obregon's army, were taken back by the United States corporal on duty there. Cos, who were civilian garb except for general's eagle on his sombrero, protested vigorously but the corporal was obstinate. Cos retired in a great huff. Castro saluted with fine grace and ordered his chauffeur to drive back to Mexico.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD TO MEET

Charitable Workers Will Gather November 30 for Session.

The district of Columbia branch of the Needlework Guild of America will hold its annual meeting and distribution of garments at the Chamber of Commerce, 1225 F street northwest, November 30, according to announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Richard B. Watrous, secretary. Mrs. Watrous said also that Mrs. La Anderson yesterday in the bankruptcy court to deny that he has committed an act of bankruptcy.

Counsel for the complaining creditors were given until Wednesday to file authorities to sustain their contention that by joining with his wife in a deed of trust on property to which she held title and which was purchased with her own funds, Mr. Means conveyed an interest in the real estate which should have been retained for the benefit of his creditors. PRACTICAL HEALTH TALKS

Lillian Whitney, M.D.

Dr. Whitney's popular articles on health and beauty subjects in several leading magazines have been attracting marked attention for a number of years. No other writer on similar topics is better equipped for the work. Dr. Whitney has established an enviable reputation as a specialist and is endowed with the ability to make herself easily understood by her readers. Her well-written letters relating to her department are promptly answered, as far as possible. All letters should be accompanied by a stamped envelope and should be addressed care of this paper.

WHAT IS FATIGUE?

Nervousness manifests itself in a variety of ways, the more important condition being a state of constant fatigue. Every exertion, however trifling, is an effort, and real demands calling for an expenditure of energy can scarcely be met. Things that ordinarily escape notice, now loom big before one; everything becomes menacing and one's entire concept of life assumes distorted proportions.

Of course, long before this unfortunate state is reached, nature has sent out endless warnings, all of which have gone unheeded, for nothing is so difficult to change as the mental and physical habits of a lifetime.

If from earliest childhood one has indulged every emotion, as is the case with most Americans, it is extremely hard to curb this tendency. If one is born with a fretful, worrisome disposition, it requires a herculean effort of the will to change it into an even, placid one; if one is temperamentally nervous, high-strung, thin-skinned, of quick and uncontrollable temper, one must worship at the altar of self-control early and late to gain strength with which to guide such a nature into sane and broad channels of thought and action. And here we have the keynote to the whole situation—self-control.

First, let me say that we must revive ideas concerning brain and nervous fatigue. Recent research on this important question proves quite conclusively that what we have heretofore regarded as brain tire and nerve tire is not such. It has been found that the nerves can go on responding to stimulation hour after hour when the muscles have long since given out; indeed, some investigators go so far as to say that the nervous system is tireless, but that the muscular system is at the bottom of all fatigue processes.

We all know that when we are completely fatigued on doing one thing it rests us to pursue another activity. For instance, we may have been spending hours superintending and cleaning house, and when worn out after this hard work go directly to the piano and play indefinitely; or we may have been practicing strenuously at the piano for two hours and then enter upon a heavy line of study.

Now, most habitually nervous people are thin, their muscular systems are poorly developed, their lung capacity is normal, and for both these reasons their blood supply is deficient. As a rule, they have false ideas concerning foods, not eating the proper kind or in sufficient quantity; hence they are poorly nourished.

All these things act and react upon each other in ways that are so clear they would seem to be self-evident. The first thing that a nervous person requires, then, is the proper balance between the nervous, muscular and circulatory systems.

GEORGETOWN MAN WILL WED FOR FOURTH TIME

Wesley L. Carter Says Mother Had Three Husbands—Brother and Sister Married Twice.

That all the brave men are not fighting with the armies of Europe was demonstrated yesterday when Wesley L. Carter, 47, a Georgetown huckster, applied for a marriage license to launch upon the matrimonial sea for the fourth time.

When Col. Knell removed his pen from his right ear and prepared to write the license he little thought the man before him deserved to be ranked with heroes.

"Have you ever been married before?" asked the colonel.

"The answer ayept him off his feet. 'Three times,' said the prospective bridegroom.

Questioned further, Carter said he was first married 25 years ago, that his first two wives were dead and the third had divorced him. He said his mother had had three husbands and that he had a brother and a sister who had each been married twice.

The young lady who is to fill the fourth chapter in Carter's matrimonial history is Miss Josephine Hawkins, 45, a resident of Georgetown.

ELECTRICAL DEALERS DISCUSS CELEBRATION

Prosperity Week Plans Include Illustrations on Development of Industry.

The executive committee of business men arranging for the program of Electrical Prosperity Week, to be held in Washington November 25 to December 4, simultaneously with a similar celebration throughout the country, met yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel to discuss plans for the week. No definite decision as to the form of program was reached. It is likely one of the principal features of the program will be a parade of automobiles and the "flood" lighting of public buildings and monuments.

The meeting yesterday was for the development of a closer relation between dealers in electrical appliances, so as to make Electrical Prosperity Week a big success. This was urged by John C. McLaughlin, chairman of the executive committee.

Another feature to be brought out during the week will be illustrations as to the development of the electrical industry in the past thirty-four years, or since it was first put into popular use.

Retail merchants of Washington will co-operate with a "dress-up and fix-up" feature. Display windows of the stores will be dressed in special attire, and every effort will be made to draw the attention of the public to the two programs.

Dartmouth President Resigns.
New York, Nov. 22.—Dr. Ernest Fox Nichols has resigned as president of Dartmouth College, and his resignation has been accepted with regret by the board of trustees.

Dr. Nichols will continue at Dartmouth until June 30 next, when he will go to Yale to resume his researches in physics, which were interrupted when he left Columbia University to become president of Dartmouth in 1909.

LUDLOW FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW

Wife of Rear Admiral Will Be Buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Mary McLean Ludlow, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Washington McLean, of Cincinnati and Washington, died Sunday evening at 9 o'clock at the home of her son, Frederick Hamilton Ludlow, 169 K street northwest, after an illness of several weeks. She is survived by a brother, John R. McLean, a sister, the wife of Admiral George Dewey, and a son, Frederick Hamilton Ludlow. She has one grandson.

Mrs. Ludlow was born in Cincinnati, Ohio. Following a period of study and travel abroad, she was married first to Mr. Bugher and later to Admiral Ludlow.

For more than thirty years Mrs. Ludlow was a resident of the National Capital. Her home in Lafayette Square, for years the center of a charming and dignified hospitality, is one of the most interesting and historic houses in the city, and furnished a fitting background for a notable hostess. The house has been leased for the last two winters, while Mrs. Ludlow made her home with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bugher.

Funeral services will be held at the Bugher home, in K street, tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, and interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

With a keen, bright mind and with the social and political history of the country at her finger-tips, she was a delightful conversationalist.

DIVORCES JAILED HUSBAND.
Justice Anderson.

Justice Anderson granted Geneva H. Buchsbaum an absolute divorce from David Rothschild yesterday. The couple were married in Washington, January 25, 1908, and have one child.

The husband is at present serving a term of nine years at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He was an attorney in Washington. Attorney Joseph Salomon represented the wife.

DAILY SHORT STORY

AT THE SIGN OF THE OWL.
By SHERWOOD GRANT.

"I wish we had something gayier than that old stuffed, grouchy thing," said Winnie reflectively, as she descended from the stoop and into her work. The other two girls came from the dining-room to take a look also. Alice in a brown and white checked apron mixing cookie dough in a huge bowl. Georgia cool and cheerful even while she wrestled single-handed with the problem of the window hangings in the two front rooms.

It was the opening day of the Owl team. Not a prepossessing day by any means, with the thunder rumbling over the hills and the quick patter of heavy rain every now and then in late autumn showers.

"But somebody's sure to drop in," Alice said hopefully. "Doesn't the house look sort of shabby?"

Even Winnie stepped on to the broad, old-fashioned porch and looked first at the house itself, that was to bring them all plenty of ready cash, if not a fortune. It was all they had left that seemed tangible. They had been left to the care of an uncle after their parents' death, and only the house up at Medbury remained now, after the passing of Uncle George.

The money had been used up on their education and maintenance. So they had to join forces and retire to Medbury to cogitate on the future and its possibilities.

Georgia, named for her uncle hopefully, had fixed on the solution. They were on the postcard. They would turn the old house into the coziest of tearooms, a sort of inn of happiness, and, since an old one appeared to be the sole tenant, they caught the bird, stuffed it after it had given up the ghost, and bestowed its name and symbol on the new venture for luck.

"I think I hear a car," Winnie's head was raised in expectancy. She was admittedly the beauty of the family. Would it be possible to call a doctor, that might be in it, and Alice was a born homemaker. She could have a lot of her own housekeeping in on almost any earthly spot.

The car came into view just as a peal of thunder rolled overhead. There were two occupants, no three, for one was sitting down on the steps reading a newspaper. "How do you do, ladies?" one said, raising his cap. "We've had an accident, and led the way into the sitting room across the hall, where it was quiet. Georgia and one of the men went to the telephone to call a doctor. The injured one was carried in and put into the best spare bed, and the car rested safely out under the old woodshed on the corner."

"Alice rose to the emergency at once. 'Bring your friend right in, she called, and led the way into the sitting room across the hall, where it was quiet. Georgia and one of the men went to the telephone to call a doctor. The injured one was carried in and put into the best spare bed, and the car rested safely out under the old woodshed on the corner.'

"We were making up time on that last stretch of road," explained Madison King, the car's owner. "My friends are visiting me over at King's Rest, my home, and I was out to see them. I held their breaths as it turned into the drive under the two big elms and drew up before the porch steps. Two young men sat in the car. They seemed worried and excited."

"How do you do, ladies?" one said, raising his cap. "We've had an accident, and led the way into the sitting room across the hall, where it was quiet. Georgia and one of the men went to the telephone to call a doctor. The injured one was carried in and put into the best spare bed, and the car rested safely out under the old woodshed on the corner."

"Well, of all things," ejaculated Winnie, in a deep, cautious whisper out in the kitchen. King's Rest was the one place of interest around Medbury. Eleanor King and her mother had gone to school together, years before, but on their return the girls had decided firmly to rise or fall on their own merits. Mrs. King could have established them forever in Medbury, but they had not let her know of their coming at all. Now fate swung her only son up to their door and he was shaking samples of them.

"Paul Lampton, the third in the party, Georgia told the other girls he was a well-known writer and to be sure and put more pepper in his salad than in the others. It would be good for him. They laughed and worked excitedly, getting up their first meal for the unexpected guests. The doctor rode over from the village and at once began his examination of Tom Bowen, a cousin of the Kings, just as he emerged with the favorable diagnosis.

Mrs. King's handsome dark blue blouse turned into the little driveway. The Owl was very busy apparently. "I can't be moved for a week any way, but he's all right," the doctor said, briskly. "The girls will look after him. I know, Mrs. King. I'll send a nurse."

Then, while the men were with Tom, the three girls and Mrs. King talked together out on the porch. "I haven't been here in years," said Mrs. King. "Not since before my marriage. Perhaps you do not know that I was your mother's maid of honor at her marriage here? I was very fond of her. This one seems to have her eyes and voice, but you have her manner." Georgia flushed happily, and Winnie was all aglow.

"Maybe we have, but I assure you, Mrs. King, Alice has her sweet disposition," Georgia said radiantly. "It was a wonderful week that followed. Tom recovered with suspicious slowness, the nurse declared. He fairly luxuriated in his dainty meals and the attention of the three hostesses. Madison and Lampton rode over daily with flowers and books, all manner of things, supposedly for the invalid, but some way they remained out in the sitting-room for the girls to enjoy."

As soon as he was able to be moved, there came a check from his father that the girls eyed doubtfully. "I think," said Winnie, judiciously, "that we should be altruistic in this. He was our guest. Can't the Owl afford a private guest girl?"

It appeared that the Owl could. The check was returned with the sweetest of notes, and Col. Bowen came down from Boston to dine with the three Graces who disdained mere profit, as he put it. There ensued such a series of motor parties and visits up at King's Rest that the girls declared they would need a guardian if they did not give up such frivolity and attend to business. But the autumn days slipped away into early winter and Mrs. King took them under her wing completely. Madison and Winnie found many errands back and forth to attend to for her, and Tom declared that he'd never kept an eyes on his diet.

Her sisters announced their engagement almost in the same breath one day up at King's Rest, but Georgia was oddly silent.

HUBBARD SCHOOL WILL BE CLOSED ALL WEEK

Officials Decide to Alleviate Fear of Diphtheria Epidemic by Keeping Building Shut.

The Hubbard public school, in Keaton street, near Eleventh street northwest, will be closed for the remainder of the week. It was decided by school officials yesterday in a conference with teachers and members of the public school medical staff. The action was taken in compliance with a request from the Hubbard Home and School Association, members of which feared an epidemic of diphtheria would break out because of the death last week of two pupils in the school from that disease.

E. L. Thurston, superintendent of public schools, conferred with H. P. Blair, president of the board of education, and members of the medical staff, and a morning session of teachers at the school building, in the building on the corner, that no danger of an epidemic of the disease existed in the building, but that it was best to allay the fears of the members of the association.

HOROSCOPE.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

Tuesday, November 23, 1915.
Caution should rule today, especially in the morning when Venus and Jupiter are both adverse. In the afternoon Mars is friendly.

The influences are not auspicious for merchants and bankers, who should guard against extreme fluctuations in trade and business confidence.

According to the stars the wise will prepare for a fairly severe winter, especially depression and difficult commercial conditions.

Women come under a sinister sway, but are not so much unlucky for business enterprises.

Changes in manners are foreshadowed, and a return to standards of reserve and modesty will be demanded for women of all classes, astrologers foretell. Complete readjustment of social relations, because of the overabundance of numbers after the killing of millions of men in the war has been long foretold by the seers.

This should be a fortunate rule for all who conduct business with structural ironworkers, carpenters and contractors.

Soldiers, policemen and stock-raisers should benefit from this sway of the stars.

Again large discoveries of precious metals are indicated for the United States.

Solicitors and canvassers should proceed largely from this government of the planets.

Success in whatever requires pluck and perseverance is supposed to be widespread while this configuration prevails.

Food will become a matter of public concern in the new year, for the stars that cheaper and better materials will be demanded. Agitation concerning market reforms and better cooking will be widespread.

A new cure for kidney diseases and other maladies affecting the organs of digestion is prophesied in the stars. Persons whose birthday it is should not speculate in the coming year. Disappointments concerning persons near in friendship of kinship are foretold. Children born on this day may be inclined to be self-indulgent and extravagant. These subjects of Sagittarius often are endowed with great foresight and common-sense. Their principal ruling planet is Jupiter.
